The D. A. R.

The Janet Montgomery Chapter of the D. A. R. met in the Club House in Rockville on April 2nd, Mrs. E. L. Bullard hostess.

Business relating to the approaching Continental Congress was transacted.

A donation was voted from the chapter treasury in answer to appeals for funds for a portrait of the late Miss Mary Desha, one of the founders of the great organization of the D. A. R., extending all over the country, and another donation towards a a memorial to the "Real Daughters" of Revolutionary soldiers.

Plans were also formulated for the marking of the grave of Sergeant Henry Leeke, of the Revolutionary War, near Sandy Spring, sometime in the early summer.

The chapter had as guests Mrs. James Wright Clarke and her daughter, of Colorado, both members of the D. A. R. in that State. Mrs. Clarke was born in Montgomery county and lived the greater part of her girlhood here. She was Miss Marian Nailor, and her ancestors were large property owners in the county. They were the original possessors of the property purchased by the late Commissioner Wheatley, in Bethesda district, still owned and occupied by Mrs. Wheatley and her daughters. Miss Clarke gave a short talk on chapter work in her State. Mrs. and Miss Clarke are cousins of Mrs. Frank P. Wilson, of Kensington, of the old Ray family of the county and member of the Janet Montgomery Chapter.

IN MEMORIAM.

The Janet Montgomery Chapter mourns with the other D. A. R. Chapters of Maryland the death of their beloved late State Regent, Mrs. Catherine Grosch Reynolds Thom, who died March 26th, 1912.

She was born in Kentucky, and her parents having died before she was two years old she was adopted and raised by her aunt, Mrs. Hanna. Mrs. Thom was educated in one of the finest schools in New York city and received the finishing touches to her education in Europe, where she met and married the late J. Pembroke Thom, while he was waiting to assume the command of a vessel designed for the Confederate navy. But France having assumed a neutral attitude toward the War between the States, the ships ordered for the fleet of Commodore Maury were never allowed to leave French waters. After the cessation of hostilities Mr. and Mrs. Thom made their home in Baltimore.

Mrs. Thom was much interested in the patriotic societies, being particularly attracted to the Daughters of the American Revolution, of which organization in Maryland she was Regent for fifteen years.

Mrs. Thom was a woman of great force of character, and commanded the respect and loyalty of everyone with whom she came into contact. Always courteous and affable, her tact and commonsense, combined with her practical knowledge of affairs, made her an ideal presiding officer, and it will be many a day before her place can be filled. She was always the great lady in every relation of life, and her character and virtues may well be an example to the young ladies of this generation.

Memorial services were held at the chapel of Christ Episcopal Church, Baltimore, April 9th at 3 P. M. All "Daughters" in the county were asked by the State Vice-Regent, Mrs. Hogan, to be present.

At a meeting held by the regents and State officers on March 28th it was resolved not to fill her place until the next election at the annual State conference in November, Mrs. Hogan in the meantime to be the acting regent.

Unglesbee-Dorsey Wedding.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at Trinity M. E. Church, Germantown, Monday afternoon last at 5:30 o'clock, when Miss Mary Elizabeth Dorsey, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Dorsey, became the bride of Mr. Beale W. Unglesbee.

The bride wore a lovely gown of white satin trimmed with lace and pearl ornaments, and carried white carnations. She was attended by her sister, Miss Minnie Dorsey, as maid of honor, who wore white messeline satin and carried pink carnations and sweet peas. The bridesmaids were Miss Ethel Hood, of Boyds, who wore pale blue silk and carried pink carnations, and Miss Sue Collins, of Germantown, who wore pale pink and carried pink carnations. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Ernest C. Gartner, as best man, and the ushers were Mr. J. Waters Woodfield and Mr. G. Slagle Dorsey. Miss Lily Shuffler, of Baltimore, played the wedding marches.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. I. Winger, pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. T. D. Richards, pastor of the Neelsville Presbyterian Church.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, after which Mr. and Mrs. Unglesbee left for an extended wedding trip.

Many handsome presents of silver, cut glass, etc., were received.

The bride is one of Germantown's most popular and attractive young ladies.

Mr. and Mrs. Unglesbee will be at home to their many friends after April 20th at Germantown, this county.

Planning For The All-Day Meeting.

The members of the Board of Managers of the Social Service League are exceedingly anxious to interest the residents of Montgomery county in its work, and they feel that this can best be done at the annual meeting to be held the last week in April, when its aims and what it has already accomplished will be fully set forth, and they appeal to all those who are interested in the welfare of the less fortunate of the county to come to the all-day meeting and bring others. There will be a place provided for those who bring luncheons—and it is hoped all will do this—where coffee will be served and a pleasant social time provided for.

One of the attractions will be the white tuberculosis car sent by the "State Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis" to be side-tracked all day at Rockville, containing many instructive and interesting things, and there will be a talk about these things for those who visit it.

SOCIAL SERVICE LEAGUE.

Blames The Faddists.

From the Washington Star of Saturday.

"The price of milk in Washington will be near the price of champagne, and that ought not to be, for some of us cannot afford champagne." This prediction was made this morning by Representative Carlin, of Virginia, who was one of a trio to appear before the House District committee in favor of the bill introduced by Representative Lewis, of Maryland. The bill provides that the District of Columbia shall pay the farmers for all cows slaughtered under the tuberculin test. Representative Carlin fired a few shots into the health office of the District of Columbia.

Representative Lewis spoke in favor of the bill, of which he is the author, as many Maryland farmers have their farms in his district. State Senator Blair Lee, of Maryland, spoke in favor of the bill, and the hearing closed at noon, after D. W. Baker, former United States Attorney in the District of Columbia, had appeared, not as an attorney, but as "a victim of the tuberculin test."

Representative Carlin said the District has all kinds of laws on the subject of milk, except a law to pay a farmer for cows slaughtered under the tuberbulin test. He also paid a compliment to Virginia cows:

"I think in the District here they are getting pure milk. I know they are getting from us the same milk that Virginia babies fatten on and grow to manhood on, but which the health officer says is fatal in this city. The tuberculin test means death to 80 per cent of the cows to which it is applied, with the great expense to the farmer, whose investment may be wiped out. Therefore some one ought to pay for the death of those cows.

"The District of Columbia not only fixes the kinds of springs the cows must drink from, but tells the farmers what sort of cow sheds to build, what sort of food the cows must eat, and now they prescribe the tuberculin test. The bill to provide for some payment to the farmer simply meets the conditions which have arisen from the activities of the faddists of the District of Columbia, and to compensate the farmer for the slaughter of the cows.

"The same health officer who brought these farmers into business without the tuberculin test now wishes to wipe them out with the test. The price of milk, under the conditions prescribed by the health officer, will be about the price of champagne, and that condition ought not to exist, for some of us cannot afford champagne."

Representative Carlin further on in his argument inferred that the health officer had never raised a cow and might not know one if he should see one.

State Senator Blair Lee, of Montgomery county, Md., made the statement that the farmers of Maryland and Virginia are subjected to a rigid tuberculin test, but that farmers of New York and Pennsylvania and far-away States can ship bad milk into Washington with only a slipshod test, if any test at all, and that the present health regulations concerning dairy products in the District actually result in a discrimination against dairy farmers near enough to the city to be under the constant watch of the health inspectors.

"It has been admitted to be," said Senator Lee, "that the health officer has not the personnel to make inspections of these far-away farms. It would appear, then, that these farmers, whose locations are so far away, can ship their rotten milk to the District of Columbia and get it sold. That keeps the price down, but if the same rigidity should be exercised in their case as is exercised in the case of Maryland and Virginia farmers the price of milk in Washington would jump."

D. W. Baker said that if a man wants to be dishonest he can easily evade the tuberculin test by "doping" his cattle a few days before the test is made.

Maryland Stands Fifteenth.

While Maryland may not yet properly be ranked as a great manufacturing State, its industries are making rapid progress not only in the number of men employed but also in the value of products of the factories, according to figures given out today by the Department of Commerce and Labor.

Maryland is the fifteenth State in the number of manufacturing plants. The State ranks fourteenth in the number of persons employed in the manufacturing business and has made an increase of 29.7 per cent. in the last 10 years in the value of its manufactured products.

From 1899 to 1904 the increase amounted to 15.3 per cent. From 1904 to 1909 there was a 30 per cent. increase.

In 1899 the State had 3,886 manufacturing establishments. In 1909 it had 4,837 plants. There were 107,303 persons engaged in the manufacturing business in 1904, while in 1909 125,489 people made their living solely from the manufactories of the State.

More than $149,155,000 was invested in Maryland manufactories in 1899. In 1909 more than $251,227,000 was so invested.

The value of the products of the State's manufacturing plants in 1899 was $211,076,000, as compared with $315,669,000 in 1909.

Of the States east of the Mississippi river West Virginia has made by far the most rapid progress in increase of manufacturing industries as well as in the number of men employed in them and the capital invested.

Mr. Lamar Again Replies.

Mr. Editor:—Mr. Henderson suggests that our controversy is becoming "somewhat personal." He alone has made it so. From the beginning of his first article to the end of his last one the language of the fish-market and the methods of the sophist have been too nearly approached by him to permit clean and fair discussion of matters of public interest.

What are the facts? Some weeks ago I published in your paper an entirely impersonal statement in explanation of a bill which I had prepared affecting our electric railroad rates. The Act to be amended was properly referred to as the Henderson law, as he had prepared and introduced it in the Legislature. The present bill proposes to give back to the commuters the rates they have lost under the operation of the Henderson law, and at the same time preserve to those who are dependent upon this line for transportation, the present 15 cent cash rate, by the use of family tickets, which are available at the small outlay of one dollar, for ten round trips, over the two short zones, and good for any family or household from the head of the family down to the cook. They may be used at any time within one year from the date of purchase.

If Mr. Henderson had any valid objection to this bill, of course he had a perfect right to use the public press in making his views known. If I were in error as to the effect of his law, he had an equal right to show that fact. But here is how he began his article in injecting himself into this controversy:

"Mr. Wm. H. Lamar makes a statement that the raise in commutation rates on the electric railroad between this town and Washington was owing to an error in the bill which he takes great unction in referring to as the Henderson bill, passed at the last session of the State Legislature. I will ask the privilege of occupying a few lines of your paper in giving a short history of this (his) bill, in order that your readers may pass judgment between Mr. Lamar and myself on this question."

Now, so far as my article was concerned, the only "question" which could possibly have been raised between Mr. Henderson and myself was whether I had erred in calling the present law by his name or whether there had been a mistake in drafting that law which permitted the railroad to raise the commutation rates. But Mr. Henderson occupied nearly a column of your paper in dodging these propositions and in working in all kinds of slurs at me without touching upon the pending bill, which was the matter before the public for consideration. He has, therefore, practically sidetracked the pending bill and brought on instead a discussion of his own legislative record upon a former bill. To this I have no objection, if he desires to give publicity to it, for he has said enough about it himself to show that he is peculiarly vulnerable on this point. I must say, however, that there is little satisfaction in discussing a matter with one who, when cornered upon one proposition, slides off to another equally untenable. To argue with him would be like chasing the will-o'-the-wisp but for the bile he leaves in his trail in the shape of personalities and his red-hot denial of immaterial facts, however susceptible of proof.

When Mr. Henderson rejected my amendment to his bill, which, as I have shown, would have protected the commuters in their existing rates, he took upon himself the full responsibility for the failure of his law to protect them. This responsibility he cannot avoid. Whatever he may have said about it at the time is immaterial, and he should be man enough to accept that responsibility without quibbling about the matter. He was a member of the committee on corporations and did insist upon having his own bill reported out of that committee in preference to the one drawn by me, and it is idle for him to try to leave the public to believe that he tried to have that measure drawn by me reported, which would have protected the commutation rates. What he may have said about this matter at the time is also immaterial. His conduct spoke louder than any words he may have uttered at that time to me. So let us not befog the issue by questions of veracity on these points.

If my recollection of Mr. Henderson's basis for fixing the commutation rate for his bill is not correct, as he states, will he kindly advise the public by what course of reasoning he arrived at the remarkable conclusion that two-thirds of the cash fare was not greater than the then existing commutation rate? Or was the rate provided for in his bill merely a wild guess on his part? In any event he should not forget that his action is costing every commuter from Rockville $8.36 a year, and that the other commuters along the line of the road are losing in the same way. They have reason to feel that whatever may have been his judgment at the time as to the effect of his bill, now that its actual effect has been demonstrated in practice, he should help to rectify the error rather than try to throw obstacles in the way of a new measure drawn to bring about that result.

Is he opposed to the relief sought by the commuters? If not, after his failure, why is he not willing at least to stand aside and let someone else try to restore the rates which he has caused them to lose?

Mr. Henderson cannot understand why it is not easier to sustain the constitutionality of a commutation rate of 3 1-3 cents for each fare zone than it would be for a rate of 2 1-8 cents. Here again he demonstrates his wonderful legal capacity. If, as has been shown, the railroad was, in fact, voluntarily giving the public the latter rate over its longest zone, it certainly could not be heard in any court to say that the 2 1-8 cents was an unreasonable rate, but Mr. Henderson entirely misses the point at issue. It was not that the commutation rate was unreasonable, as he supposes, but the contention of the company was that the Legislature had no power to fix any rate except a maximum cash rate, which latter must not be so low as to be confiscatory, and that all other passenger rates must necessarily be optional with the company.

This, in my opinion, is not good law. Our Legislature has just repudiated any such contention.

The Bethesda Citizens' Association has not "turned down" the present bill, as stated by Mr. Henderson. On the contrary, all of the people in that section and many of those in Rockville appear to be highly pleased with it, as was demonstrated by the unanimously signed petition sent to the Legislature in its favor.

It is all right, I suppose, for Mr. Henderson to suggest another method of protecting the commuters now, upon the adjournment of the Legislature, when he has failed for weeks and months to do so while it was in session. His plan, however, is fatally defective in that it contains nothing which would put an end to the expensive litigation over the matter of the regulation of rates on this road, which has been in progress from the passage of his law to the present time.

Again, Mr. Henderson says:

"But the most dangerous feature of the new bill is that the commutation rates might be held to be unconstitutional and the law holding them down to three zones would be repealed."

Any port in a storm! Has Mr. Henderson read the bill or does he fail to grasp the meaning or legal effect of the following provision in it?

"It is hereby declared that each and every provision of this Act depends upon and is in consideration of each and every other provision thereof and that this Act must be read and construed as a whole."

With this provision, no court on earth could strike down one provision of the bill and let another stand. If one provision goes, the whole Act goes, and that would leave the Henderson law unrepealed, for the repealing clause is just as much a part of the Act as anything else contained in it.

Strange to say, Mr. Henderson does not yet understand why the Federal court held the penalty clause of his law to be unconstitutional. It was not, as he says, on account of the fact that a fine of $100 was excessive, but that the method of seizing the cars and stopping traffic, under the execution provided for the collection of the fine, was so unreasonable and destructive of the business of the road as to make that provision unconstitutional.

Little errors like these do not affect Mr. Henderson when called to his attention. It is an all-sufficient answer for him to say, "I do not consider him (Mr. Lamar) to be the acme of political or judicial sagacity."

There is one thing, however, which he should bear in mind, and that is, that the people of this county took an accurate measurement of him as a law maker in 1910, and his vote in the primaries for a renomination last summer was their verdict upon his performances as a legislator, and he will have to make a new record before he can be presumed to speak for the public with respect to me or anything else.

I must confess that I have been a little provoked by Mr. Henderson's personal references, but notwithstanding all this, I wish him no harm. I would rather help than injure him. I have supported him for office in the past and may do so in the future if he develops any capacity to profit by experience. His position upon public questions, generally, at Annapolis showed political integrity on his part, and that should cover a multitude of legislation mistakes. He will be all right if he will only get in little closer touch with his fellowman and once realize that he can learn something, even from the most lowly. Let him give other people credit for some good qualities of mind and heart. We must all absorb something. We cannot evolve everything. Anyone can slur, make insinuations and even try to destroy character for fairness in public dealings, but such methods are poor substitutes for sound argument and will not fool the public.

W. H. LAMAR.

In Memoriam.

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear mother, Mrs. Rachel Rebecca Dove, who departed this life one year ago, April 5th, 1911.

One year has passed, our hearts still sore,
As time goes by we miss her more,
Her memory is as dear to-day
As on the day she passed away.

You were a tender, loving mother,
A mother kind and true,
A mother and friend who would never shirk
Whenever a kind act you could do.

In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the trees so gently wave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly
In her lonely, silent grave.

Thou art not forgotten, mother,
Nor will thou ever be,
As long as life and memory last
We will remember thee.

By her loving daughter, V. M. L.

Mrs. J. L. Starnes, Hickory, N. C., has in the past suffered severely with throat and lung trouble, and says, "I used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for this and it gave me immediate satisfaction and relief. It gives me pleasure to recommend this preparation for sore throat, hoarseness, or any affection of the throat or lungs. I know it will do all claimed for it." For sale by all druggists.

"I had a cough which hung on for two years when I began using Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. I kept on until the cough finally left me and I gained in weight from 113 to 185 pounds. In two years I have grown strong and healthy, all from the use of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, which cured me." For sale by all druggists.

Frame that Picture.

Everyone has pictures of friends, etc., lying around the house in a manner showing great disrespect to the original of the same. We neglect to frame them for various reasons, one of them often because of the expense attached thereto. At Reisinger's you can get a neat oval ebony frame for 10c only, such as you could not have made to order for double that amount.

R. G. Collins, postmaster at Barnegat, N. J., advises his friends: "I find your Foley's Honey and Tar Compound the best remedy for a cough I ever tried. I had a lagrippe cough that left me completely exhausted, but after taking half a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, the coughing spells entirely ceased. I wish to say it can't be beat." For sale by all druggists.

W. T. Gilly, a prominent dealer in Pennington Gap, Va., was so bothered with kidney and bladder trouble that he could not attend to business. He says, "I had severe pains in my back and kidneys and had to get up ten to fifteen times each night. Saw Foley Kidney Pills advertised and bought two bottles, and soon felt great relief, and was entirely cured. No longer disturbed at night, but sleep till morning." For sale by all druggists.

Dr. J. T. R. Neal, Prop. Riverside Drug Co., Greenville, S. C., writes recently, "I have been a practicing physician and druggist for over 35 years and have sold and administered many kidney medicines, but none to equal Foley Kidney Pills. They are superior to any I ever used, and give the quickest and most permanent relief." For sale by all druggists.
