The entire excavation has been made by members of the church who own horses and tools necessary for the work, and under the supervision of the church trustees. Farm Demonstration Notes.

The Maryland State Board of Agriculture has issued the following regulation covering the feeding of garbage to hogs: "Garbage, table refuse or other products which might contain pieces or scraps of pork of any description, other than that made on the premises where fed, which has not been previously sterilized, shall not be fed to swine on any premises in the State of Maryland without first having been heated sufficiently to destroy the hog cholera virus. Sterilizing apparatus used for this purpose shall be subject to the inspection and approval of the Live Stock Sanitary Section of the Maryland State Board of Agriculture." The necessity for such a regulation arises from the fact that 40 percent of the losses from cholera in 1918 was caused by feeding unsterilized garbage.

The Farm Demonstration Office will have a few packages of wilt-resistant tomato seed for distribution. This seed should go to those who have had trouble with the wilt disease. These resistant strains of several different varieties have been developed at the Experiment Station and go a long way toward insuring a crop where the disease is prevalent. This disease cannot be controlled by spraying. Anyone wishing one of these packages of seed should communicate with County Agent Van Hoesen.

Some interesting figures were obtained from the records kept by the threshermen of the county on the acreage and yield of wheat in 1918. The total acreage reported on 1,000 farms was 33,779 acres, or an average of approximately 34 acres per farm. These acres threshed out 518,036 bushels, or an average of 12.3 bushels per acre. Of course last year's wheat crop was below the average yield because of the severe winter, but these figures are suggestive in connection with the figures secured last spring in the survey of the cost of growing an acre of wheat. That survey showed our wheat was costing $1.80 per bushel on the basis of 20 bushels to the acre yield. The actual yield was but 12 bushels to the acre. This means that it cost the farmers approximately $3 per bushel on the average to grow it. And yet the consumer insists that the farmer is getting rich on $2.20 wheat. Somebody is dreaming.

The above figures also suggest that the wheat crop receives more attention from the man who grows it. A better yielding variety, better quality seed, a proper top dressing at the proper time, treating seed for smut, may boost the yield so as to make the difference between profit and loss on the crop. If it cannot be grown at a profit, then a substitute for the wheat crop should be sought. To grow a crop from habit rather than for profit can no longer be justified. The individual grower must beat the average or be beaten. If the margin of profit per bushel is small, there must be enough bushels to insure a reasonable profit per acre.

Four Hundred And Fifty Miles Of Trees.

By F. W. BESLEY, STATE FORESTER.

Arbor Day, by proclamation of the Governor, comes early in April. On this day, many memorial trees will be planted for those who made the supreme sacrifice in the great war, and surely there could be no more fitting memorials. Not only will individual trees be planted around the home, there will be extensive planting along the roadsides.

What could be more fitting than planting memorial trees along the State Highway from Worcester to Garrett, passing through Baltimore and seven counties, covering about 400 miles of roadway, of which, eliminating the wooded portions and stretches where planting is impossible, would leave approximately 175 miles suitable for planting?

To make the plan State-wide and include all of the counties, an extension from Baltimore to Prince Frederick and another from Rockville to Leonardtown would add 50 miles suitable for planting, and include the remaining counties of the State. This may seem like a large program and could not be carried out in one year. A start should be made this spring, and the planting extended from year to year until completed. Different communities and organizations in each county would plant different portions of the roadway, and in a few years it should be possible to link these up by a State system, each portion planted to preserve its identity by suitable markers or monuments. The plan offers unlimited opportunities for participation.

The State Roadside Tree Law, enacted in 1914, provides for the planting of trees along the highway and places the protection of roadside trees under the State Board of Forestry. The proper plan for procedure would be for those who want to plant to select a portion of the roadway and apply to the State Board of Forestry for an examination of the location to determine the suitability for planting, the best species to use, and estimated costs, and thus work out a uniform system of planting.

The cost of the trees and their planting will vary from $1.00 to $3.00 each, depending upon local conditions. After the trees are planted, their care and protection would properly come under the State Board of Forestry. The planting would have to be done in accordance with regulations of the State Roads Commission, as affecting the roadway, and the trees should not be less than fifty feet apart. For trees attaining very large size seventy-five feet between the proper distance, thus requiring from 150 to 200 trees per mile, planting both sides of the roadway.

It would also be desirable for each county to select a particular kind of tree for general planting, thus giving to each county's roadway a distinctive feature. Native species should be used as far as possible. Fortunately, Maryland has so many different kinds of native trees suitable for roadside planting in each county and Baltimore city that an inexhaustible list is presented. Under the plan proposed, the individual grower or organization could have its distinctive memorial; yet the combined results would serve as fitting memorial for the entire State and be of such a character as to increase in beauty and service with the passing years.

Assessment Of Gold Mine Property Stands.

In the Circuit Court here, Judge Edward C. Peter has dismissed the appeal of the Atlantic Development Company, which owns about 2,300 acres of land in Bethesda and Potomac districts, this county, from the decision of the Maryland State Tax Commission, sustaining the County Commissioners for this county in their assessment of the company's holdings.

For the property in question, the company, it is understood, paid considerably more than $600,000, and the commissioners assessed the property at about one-third its cost. Claiming that the assessment was much higher than that placed on other and better property in the same neighborhood, the company appealed to the State Tax Commission, but the commission refused to change the assessment, holding that it was gold mining and not farming property.

Judge Peter dismissed the appeal on the ground that the Circuit Court was without jurisdiction, inasmuch as a question of fact was involved, whereas the tax law permits an appeal to the Circuit Court only on a question of law.

The case was hotly contested. The company was represented by Albert M. Boice, and the County Commissioners and State Tax Commission by Bowie F. Waters and Robert B. Peter, of this county, and Wm. M. Marbury, of Baltimore.

Chevy Chase Items.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. John Richard Nicholson will be glad to learn of the convalescence of their son John, familiarly called Tannie, from his very severe illness of the flu, followed by neuritis. His almost complete recovery from his illness is largely due to the untiring skillful and masterly way in which his latest physicians, Dr. Chester D. Swope and Dr. H. G. Hadley, have handled his case at the Washington Sanitarium of Takoma Park, Md. When he was taken to the sanitarium he was helpless and bedridden, but he is now able to walk and see his many friends. His parents expect to have him back home in a short time.

Benjamin Franklin Davis, better known as Inky Davis, who has played base ball all through the county and who was Secretary of our Legion in Berne, Switzerland, has been appointed on the Peace Commission in Paris, France. His brother, Charles Edgar Davis, a graduate of Georgetown University and a member of the Washington Bar, is Vice Consul in Paris, France.

Major Brooke Lee and Capt. Blair Lee are both in Paris, France.

Capt. Thomas K. Conrad is in France and has just received word of the death of his mother.

Major D. John Markey, of the One hundred and Twelfth Machine Gun Battalion, made up of Maryland men now in France, strongly urges that the friends of the boys back home systematically make a practice of mailing to them the comic supplements of the Sunday issues of the daily papers. The great problem now, Major Markey writes, is to entertain the boys and help them stand the strain of waiting to come home. The comic supplements are largely sought, he says, and a regular supply of them will be of great service. There is a chance for everyone to do a service to a Maryland boy in France, homesick with waiting.

Plot "Bloody" Revolt.

Mail matter seized since the signing of the armistice has disclosed that the I. W. W., anarchists, radical socialists and others are "perfecting an amalgamation" which has for its object the overthrow of the American government through a "bloody revolution" and the establishment of a bolshevik republic, according to a memorandum sent to the Senate propaganda committee by Solicitor Wm. H. Lamar, of the Postoffice Department. The memorandum was made public Monday by the committee, and Chairman Overman said it would be read into the record.

Declaring that in bolshevism the radical elements of the country had for the first time "found a common cause upon which they unite," Mr. Lamar said his information showed that propaganda against the government was being conducted with great regularity, and that its magnitude could be measured by the "bold and outspoken statements" found in the literature.

Accompanying his memorandum were several hundred excerpts from mail matter showing the trend of the propaganda. These will be made public later.

Particular reference was made by Solicitor Lamar to the activity of the disaffected foreign element in the country, but he said perhaps the I. W. W. was the most active in the dissemination of the propaganda, because it "has at its command a large field force known as recruiting agents, subscription agents, &c., who work unceasingly in the furtherance of the cause."

Mr. Lamar's memorandum, to which was attached a list of newspapers printed in English and foreign languages alleged to be regularly conducted and published by the I. W. W., adds:

"This organization publishes at least five newspapers in the English language and nine in foreign languages, as shown in the list given below. This list comprises only official papers of the organization and does not take into account the large number of free-lance papers published in the interest of the above organization."

The newspapers listed were The New Solidarity, English, weekly, Chicago; One Big Union, English, monthly, Chicago; Industrial Unionist, English, weekly, Seattle; California Defense Bulletin, English, weekly, San Francisco; The Rebel Worker, English, bimonthly, New York; La Nueva Solidaridad, Spanish, weekly, Chicago; Glos, Truzenta, Russian, weekly, Chicago; Li Nuovo Proletario, Italian, weekly, Chicago; Nya Valden, Swedish, weekly, Chicago; Der Industrialier Arbeiter, Jewish, weekly, Chicago; Probuia, Bulgarian, weekly, Chicago; A Fels Budallas, Hungarian, weekly, Chicago.

The information furnished by Solicitor Lamar was corroborated by statements concerning the objects of bolshevism, made by Col. Raymond Robins, of Chicago, former head of the Red Cross mission in Russia, when he again appeared before the committee, and submitted confidential documents, showing the extraordinary but unsuccessful efforts by David R. Francis, American Ambassador to Russia, and himself to make the bolshevik fight Germany.

Regulation To Prevent The Spread Of Hog Cholera.

Garbage, table refuse or other products which might contain pieces or scraps of pork of any description, other than that made on the immediate premises where fed, which has not been previously sterilized, shall not be fed to swine on any premises in the State of Maryland without first having been heated sufficiently to destroy the hog cholera virus."

Sterilizing apparatus used for this purpose shall be subject to the inspection and approval of the Live Stock Sanitary Section of the Maryland State Board of Agriculture.

Regarding the foregoing regulation, its advisability will probably be questioned by some, while others will think they can take advantage of it because it states that "garbage, table refuse or other products that might contain pieces or scraps of pork, other than that made on the immediate premises,  the following reason for its issuance and its being so worded is probably warranted, not only to explain the regulation, but also to explain why such a product, no matter from what source obtained, should not be fed to hogs without first being sterilized."

The vital point which must never be lost sight of is that garbage that contains pieces or scraps of pork which have been derived from various sources, contains the infection or causative agent of hog cholera at practically all times. This is conceded by all authorities on garbage feeding, even by the most radical advocates of this method of garbage disposal.

The report of the hog cholera virus for the State of Maryland for the year 1918 shows that in the cases where it was possible to trace the source of infection that 40 percent of the outbreaks was due to garbage feeding. In fact, this agent was responsible for nearly as many outbreaks as all other agencies combined, and it is a significant fact that this product was fed by only a very small percentage of those raising hogs. It is also conceded by every authority on garbage feeding that it cannot be fed successfully in a hit-or-miss manner, and that the project requires careful study of housing facilities, proper feeding and prevention of disease.

It is appreciated that unsterilized garbage can be safely used to feed hogs that have been immunized by the double treatment. However, to permit the maintenance of such a garbage feeding plant means the perpetuation of infected premises which will always be a menace to the raising of swine in that vicinity.

In framing the regulation, cognizance was taken of the fact that much of the garbage which was fed to the premises where it was made, the fed and the raised, was made in such a manner that it contained no pork product, or if so, it was usually grown on the premises, and, therefore, known to be free from the disease.

You will, therefore, understand that although the regulation was not framed to cover the feeding of garbage on the premises where it was made, the fed and the raised, it was made in such a manner that it contained no pork product, or if so, it was usually grown on the premises, and, therefore, known to be free from the disease.

The vitality of the organism that causes hog cholera can not survive a temperature of 212 degrees Fahrenheit, but unless every particle of the infected meat is brought to this temperature the danger of spreading the disease is practically as great as if no heat had been applied.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially prepared for kidney trouble—they are recommended by thousands. Can residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a citizen of this locality?

J. W. Case, Gaithersburg, Md., says: "About 12 years ago I had a bad case of kidney trouble. My back hurt me and the secretions were very irregular in passage. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and tried them. They helped me greatly and I recommended them to other kidney sufferers."
