INAUGURAL CEREMONIES.

From Washington to McKinley. From 1789 to 1901.

Numerous interesting inaugurations have been held since Washington first took the oath of office, but none have equaled in splendor the ceremonies which will mark the beginning of Wm. McKinley's second term as president.

Washington lodged on Cherry street New York, then the capital of the republic, and under escort of soldiers and civilians, including the cabinet and the municipal officers of New York, the first president was taken to Federal hall, on Wall street, where, in the senate chamber, the oath of office was administered. At night, after the demonstration, Washington walked home. Four years later, the scene was shifted to Independence hall, Philadelphia, where Washington took the oath the second time; but there was no parade, no demonstration.

Independence hall was also the scene of John Adams' inaugural. Thos. Jefferson was the central figure of the first inauguration in Washington, going on foot to the capitol to take the oath. He was dressed in simple fashion, and it is even said his slippers were down at the heels.

President-elect Madison was escorted to the hall of the house of representatives by militia, past thousands of men and women who lined the sidewalks. At night, many paid their respects to the president and his wife, the festivities winding up with a ball.

Monroe's inauguration was the first out-of-door event in Washington inaugurations. The day was charming, and Monroe read his address from a temporary platform. Four years later, it rained and snowed, and the ceremonies were held indoors.

John Quincy Adams, in 1825, was attended by an elaborate escort of soldiers, sailors and citizens. After the ceremony he retired to his room and constructed the cabinet.

The largest crowd up to that period attended Jackson's first inaugural. Ten thousand people gathered about the capitol, and after the address the general rode to the White House on horseback, whither he was followed by throngs that crowded into the White House. The enthusiasm at Jackson's second inaugural was on a par with the first.

Van Buren rode from the White House to the capitol with his predecessor under armilitary escort. Two inaugural balls were given at night. A military and civic cavaloade attended Wm. Henry Harrison in 1841, when he rode to the capitol to take the oath. Washington was filled with log cabins, and the enthusiasm was of the hurrah order. Harrison returned to the White House on the back of a gallant charger. The new president attended three balls in the evening.

It rained during Polk's inauguration and Mrs. Polk frowned upon the balls that wound up the festivities.

Taylor, seated by the side of his predecessor Polk, drove to the capitol in a rain and wind storm. Clubs came from Virginia and Maryland and volunteer companies led the way. Taylor attended all three inauguration balls with his daughter, Mrs. Bliss.

Pierce stood erect in his carriage from the White House to the capitol, beside President Fillmore, and in taking the oath of office he did not swear, but affirmed. He was the first president to deliver his address without notes.

Buchanan's inaugural ball was an especially brilliant affair, the most brilliant up to that day. Lincoln rode to the capitol with Buchanan, between double files of cavalry, infantry closing up the rear. Riflemen were placed on roofs along the line of march, holding themselves in readiness for any outbreak, while the approaches to the capitol were commanded by artillery. Some 20,000 people listened to the address. Four years later peace reigned in the land when Lincoln took the oath of office the second time amidst wonderful enthusiasm.

Grant's inauguration in 1869 and 1877 were brilliant military pageants. Garfield's inauguration was marked with a brilliant pageant.

A tremendous crowd of Democrats saw Grover Cleveland inaugurated the first time, but his second inauguration was not attended with so much enthusiasm. Harrison's inauguration was a noisy one, so was McKinley's first. Hayes, Garfield, Cleveland, Harrison and McKinley rode in carriages, and McKinley will ride in a carriage on Monday with Mark Hanna by his side.

As the nation grows in size and wealth, the inaugural demonstrations become more and more magnificent, almost rivaling in splendor the pageants of European royalty. Yet it is a far cry from the sentiments of the European to those of the American. The latter admires the glitter and display, the majesty of an inauguration, as heralding to the world the might of his own country; but he has no use for the monarchical spirit which prompts similar displays across the Atlantic. The American pageant represents the power of the people, while the European pageant is symbolical of the power of individuals—kings and emperors.

ROME, March 2.—Pope Leo is 91 years old today. He is being inundated with messages of congratulation from all over the world. Dr. Mazzoni, the pope's physician, says his holiness is in good health.

BOYS WANT ENCAMPMENT

University Cadets Strongly Argue for It.

The University cadets are unanimously in favor of a spring encampment. The reason the boys are beginning so early to agitate the question is that there is a feeling that the faculty is not entirely in accord with the proposition.

Said one prominent officer of the cadets this morning: "A 10 days' camp life and the discipline that goes with it, rounds up a year of technical soldiering and campus drilling and the like. In the camp we have genuine guard duty, cook house experience, drill in making and breaking camp, and a hundred other practical experiences that campus soldiers do not learn.

"We learn tactics, general drill, target practice and everything contained in a thorough curriculum at the university, but we feel we should have a god practical finishing off by an encampment.

In the regular army, soldiers do little else than drill in barrack life, and study tactics, but in times of peace, every year a summer encampment is arranged.

A MIX-UP!

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1.—In the house today a rule was finally adopted when Richardson made a point of order that the rule provides that a bill shall be taken from the speaker's table. Yesterday a bill was referred to the committee on military affairs and was not laid on the speaker's table. Richardson appealed and a roll call was ordered and so an almost endless fight continued.

A communication from Former Attorney General Monett, of Ohio, declaring the anti-trust bill now in the hands of the senate judicial committee, to be constitutional was introduced by Pettigrew and referred. The senate then became agitated over the South Dakotians resolution for the discharge of the interstate committee for the further consideration of the house bill requiring common carriers to equip cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes.

For Assault to Kill.

A. H. Anderson was arrested last night by Constable Kaufman, of Judge George's court, on a charge of assault with intent to kill. The complaining witness is Ralph Cobb. Anderson was released upon furnishing bail in the sum of $750.

A New Industry.

A new firm under the name of "The 3 S's" Manufacturing Co. has opened an establishment at 307 Union street for the manufacture of shirts, ladies' waists and skirts. The machines they use are run by electric power, and a skirt or waist, the latest style, can be turned out in a few hours. The machines are the very latest, and their work is of the best, as they employ only experienced help. There is a fine opening for a firm of this kind. Great success is predicted for them.

Spring Styles.

Miss Lamb, of the firm of Lamb Sisters, who recently opened dressmaking parlors at 310-311 Collins block, is leaving for New York next Thursday. Miss Lamb will study the spring styles while she is in New York, so that during the coming spring and summer the firm will be in a position to turn out the most up-to-date work. During her absence her sister will transact their business.
