KAISER'S SON WITH TROOPS.

Bavarians Concentrated Near Potsdam, Is Report Heard in Berlin.

BERLIN, June 2.—The Tageblatt publishes, under reserve, sensational reports of the concentration of Bavarian troops in the neighborhood of Potsdam and that Prince August Wilhelm of Prussia, son of the former emperor, is playing a conspicuous part in the movement.

The Tageblatt fears that, despite the disinclination of all parties to indulge in disorders, there are still groups seeking thereby to bring calamity on Germany.

PLANS TO COMBINE TWO UNIVERSITIES BEING CONSIDERED

Merger of George Washington and American Institutions Believed Possibility.

A combination of George Washington University and American University, the two to form a great American university founded on the ideals of George Washington as outlined in his last will and testament, is now a possibility. Within a short time the plan will be in the hands of a committee, representing in its membership both institutions. Details of the merger will be worked out, and when completed the proposition will be submitted to the boards of trustees.

First steps were taken in this direction yesterday, when John B. Larnier, chairman of the board of trustees of George Washington University, and Henry B. F. Macfarland, a member of the board, met members of the board of trustees of the American University and laid before them a plan for the merger. The proposition was favorably received by officials of the latter institution. A committee was named by them to meet a similar committee to be appointed by George Washington University.

Advantages Emphasized.

In presenting the plan for the merger George Washington University officials emphasized the following advantages to be mutually gained:

The combination would result in an American University to rank among the largest institutions of learning in the United States, beneficial not only to Washington, but to the country at large. George Washington had an enrollment last year of 4,800 students and holds property in the city valued at more than $1,000,000.

The present American University has an enrollment of 100 students and holds property and buildings valued at $4,000,000.

George Washington has a complete faculty in every branch of learning taught at any university.

The American University has a complete faculty in post-graduate studies.

A combination of the two institutions would result in an approximate enrollment of more than 4,500 students in the beginning, complete faculties in graduate and undergraduate studies and equipment valued at more than $5,000,000.

Finances of Both Good.

Both institutions are "on their feet" at the present time, under no debts or obligations. The new institution, therefore, would be enabled to start clear, something, it is stated, which hardly would be possible for a new institution under other circumstances.

The meeting of the officials representing the two institutions yesterday was preliminary to the convocation exercises of American University, held in the grove amphitheater of the university grounds.

William Jennings Bryan introduced the principal speaker of the day, Right Rev. Samuel D. Chown of Toronto, general superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada. The bishop spoke on the subject: "Reciprocity Between the United States and Canada."

"Canada's role in the future," he said, "is to act as interpreter between the United States and England. Canada understands the psychology of both and must make them better acquainted."

"We approve of resolutions passed by representative bodies in the United States against the interference by your Congress in British internal affairs. We of Canada and of England do not believe the majority in the United States Senate expresses the will of the people any more than do you believe it, especially on the eve of a presidential election."

Irish Tangle Discussed.

"We deplore the low plane upon which the Senate has placed the league of nations. We honor George Washington as you honor him, but we do not believe that your great country can trust to the guidance of a dead hand. All Europe looks to you for leadership. I beseech you in the name of humanity not to disappoint us. Help us to stop this whole nefarious business of warfare. Why have you been raised to such a position of wealth and power if it is not to lead the world?"

"Ireland seems to puzzle some of your people. Ireland puzzles England. Ireland puzzles the Irish. Ireland is a sore in the body politic. It is a punishment for a crime of our forefathers. We have not found the answer of how to solve Ireland's difficulties."

"England would pay a very large sum indeed if some American could suggest a practical remedy for Ireland's troubles. It is the armchair critic who has an easy time and the statesman who must work by the sweat of his brow. If Ireland could tell us what she wants—apart from complete separation—she would get it."

Two Receive Degrees.

Bishop John W. Hamilton, chancellor of the university, presided. Those who received degrees were Claudine Elizabeth Clements, doctor of philosophy, for her thesis, "The Development of Jewish Apocalyptic Ideas and Their Influence Upon Paul," and Harry Joseph Heltman, master of arts, for his thesis, "Brief Exposition of the History and Relationship of the Common Law Actions of Trespass and Trespass on the Case."

SPIRIT OF ARMENIA DEPICTED IN PLAYLET

Entertainment Given at Wardman Park Hotel for Benefit of Near East Relief.

"The Spirit of Armenia," a two-part playlet consisting of folk songs and dances, was the feature of the entertainment for the benefit of the Near East Relief, at Wardman Park Hotel Monday night. Miss Marjorie Webster impersonated the Spirit, ushering in Mme. Koshkarian, clad in an ancient Armenian bridal robe and attended by Misses Elizabeth Roe Caldwell and Elizabeth Pesson, as principals, with Misses Olive Chace, Ida Clagett, Theresa Pyle, Grace Newton, Rachel Ashley and Mary Noble as attendants. The songs and dances depicted hope, joy, patriotism and courage in Armenian literature, art and music.

In the second part Miss Webster gave the "Dance of Refugees" enacting phases of refugee life during the war. Characters depicted were: Grandmother, Mrs. William E. Chamberlin; Mother, Mrs. A. H. Bakshian; with Mary Bakshian, Tom Clagett, Billie Roberts and Violet Nappl. Nicholas G. Ikonian impersonated the Turk; Mrs. Edgar Hubbell was Protection, shown as Britannia; Mrs. James Pleasant Woods was France; Col. F. Q. Donaldson and Lieut. Townsend, America; Jack Polkinnhorn, the Young Armenian Republic; Miss Hannah H. Arnold, the Near East Relief Worker; Paul Starkweather, the Bolshevik Menace, and little Armen Bakshian, the Orphan, come to America asking for food and a mother.

John Barrett received her in the name of American generosity, the audience contributing in cash and pledges $250 for the orphans she represented. The lines were read behind the scenes by Mrs. Cabot Stevens. Returns from the fete and musical were reported at a tea to be given to the committee chairman at 3:30 o'clock Monday, June 7, in the garden of the College Women's Club, 1822 1 street northwest.

ROBBED DEAD TO PLAY RACES.

Clerk Charged With Stealing $20,000 at New York Morgue.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Charged with the theft of $20,000, representing money taken from the pockets of unidentified dead at the city's morgue.

William Becker, a clerk in the public administrator's office, was arrested last night and locked up in police headquarters. He was taken into custody while on his way to return some of the papers which the police say he confessed he had taken from the administrator's files.

Becker admitted, the police say, that his first theft was in 1918, when he took $50 to play a "sure tip" on a horse race and lost. Other sums were taken and lost the same way, according to the police.
