There is a possibility that Cardinal Gibbons will visit Rome and pay his respects to the Pope during the coming summer. It was shown that Holwell had never before been in trouble and had always borne an excellent reputation. In view of that, Judges Urner and Peter suspended sentence on condition that he return to Kansas City and place himself under the control of the Judge of the Juvenile Court. Because of his youth, Coleman was also suspended in the case that his father was required to take the boy before Judge Ohio Railroad road crosses over the road, and all persons are further order

Wilson, a grandson, $1,000; to James Lee, servant, $100, and directs that the residue go to the widow for life, with power to dispose of the estate by will as she sees fit.

Duesberry and the negro were members of a party of men who were on their way from Baltimore to Cumberland to work, and the shooting occurred on a Baltimore and Ohio train between Rockville and Gaithersburg. The negro was instantly killed. The testimony showed that the men quarreled and that one of the party drew a revolver and fired, the bullet striking the negro in the chest. The penalty is from five to eighteen years. Sentence has not been imposed.

The will of Willam B. Mobley has been admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court here. It was executed February 20, 1918, and names Mrs. Clara B. Mobley and Geo. W. Mobley, widow and son, respectively, of the testator, as executors. The instrument bequaaths to the widow the home in Laytonsville and a portion of the household furniture, silverware, china, etc., for life, and upon her death to go to George W. Mobley; to William B. It directs that one-third of the residue of the personal property shall go to the widow absolutely, and that two-thirds be equally divided among the testator's children—Walter W. Mobley, Geo. W. Mobley and Mrs. Edith M. Gaither—after allowances are made for certain advances to all of the beneficiaries. It further directs that if any of the bodies now interred in the family lot in the Laytonsville cemetery be removed, the child responsible shall forfeit all interest in the estate.

Warning To Dog Owners.

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Montgomery County Game and Fish Protective Association was held in Judge Gaither's office, Rockville, on Saturday, March 20th. The members assembled at the special call of the president to consider matters.

Among the subjects considered was the present Dog Tax Law and the manner of collecting the dog tax. It was pointed out that many dog owners fail to pay this tax; that the dogs are allowed to run at large contrary to law, thereby destroying the nests and young game birds and causing more destruction of game in a single season than all the licensed gunners of the county. The Association went on record as favoring the constable method of collecting the dog tax, and in this it has the support of the County Commissioners, who have urged our representatives at Annapolis to have the State Dog Law so amended for Montgomery county.

The attention of the public is called to the fact that an unlicensed dog is a nuisance in law and may be killed by anyone whose yard or field it enters. The members of the Association are going to avail themselves of this privilege. Most of the members can shoot, so, unlicensed dogs, look out for your hides, and as for the cats—well, their friends ought to warn them to stay close to home.

The Association urged the passage of a law requiring a license for trapping fur-bearing animals.

Since all the members of this Association are deeply interested in the preservation of game and fish, it was deemed fit that no deputy game warden should be appointed in the county without the approval of the Association.

Toward the close of the meeting Mr. John F. Mills gave an interesting talk on the relative merits of the Ithaca, Parker and L. C. Smith make of guns for both field and trap purposes.

A vote of thanks was tendered Judge Gaither for his courtesy in allowing the use of his office for the meetings of the Association.

There is going to be a banquet soon. Come to the next meeting and learn something about it.

Forrest Eaglin Found Guilty Of Attempted Assault.

Forrest Eaglin, a young negro of Washington city, was found guilty in the Circuit Court here on Wednesday last on the charge of attempting criminal assault on Miss Mary Saunders, and sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment. The assault was attempted at Somerset, near Chevy Chase, on the afternoon of July 5 last.

The trial was submitted to the three judges, the accused electing this form in preference to a jury, and occupied two days.

Miss Saunders was unable to positively identify Eaglin as her assailant, but testified that the resemblance was very strong. Eaglin endeavored to set up an alibi, but several witnesses testified to seeing him near the spot where the assault was attempted, and the court found the weight of evidence against the accused.

Enthusiastic Annual Meeting Of The Farm Bureau.

The first annual meeting of the Montgomery County Farm Bureau, which was held in the assembly hall of the Rockville High School Tuesday, was a splendid success in every way. The entire program was carried out as published last week. The morning session was given up to business matters. One-half of the district directors whose terms of office expired Tuesday were re-elected. They are as follows: L. E. Riggs, A. D. Trundle, G. R. Canby, J. B. Diamond, Jr., Windsor W. Hodges and Parker L. Weller. Three directors-at-large were also re-elected: C. L. Gilpin, W. M. Magruder and W. W. Moore.

In spite of the persistent opposition of the Extension Service of the State College to the name of "Farm Bureau," there was but one vote in favor of changing the name. The organization is already proving its ability to get what it wants. The name Farm Bureau is attracting much favorable attention through the country, about 30 States already joining in the American Federation of Farm Bureaus. Montgomery is the first county in Maryland to line up directly and openly with the national movement.

A few other minor amendments relating to the time of the annual meeting and the monthly meetings of the board of directors were made to the constitution.

The afternoon program was one of unusual interest. Director of Extension, Nat T. Frame, Morgantown, W. Va.; Mr. Angelo, Washington, D. C.; Charles W. Holman, of the National Board of Farm Organizations, and A. P. Sandles, Columbus, Ohio, Secretary of the National Farmers' Congress, being the speakers. Their addresses were strong, straight-from-the-shoulder talks on the necessity and benefits of farmers' organizations, and they were enthusiastically received by one of the most representative audiences of Montgomery county farmers ever assembled. The officers of the Farm Bureau are to be congratulated on the success of the work of the past six months and on the excellent program provided for the annual meeting.

A Hundred Men On An Island.

From the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

Put 100 men on an island where fish is a staple article of sustenance. Twenty-five of the men catch fish. Twenty-five others clean the fish. Twenty-five cook the fish. Twenty-five hunt fruit and vegetable. The entire company eat what thus is gathered and prepared.

So long as everybody works there is plenty. All hands are happy.

Ten of the allotted fish catchers stop catching fish. Ten more dry and hide part of the fish they catch. Five continue to catch fish, but work only part of the day at it.

Fewer fish go into the community kitchen.

But the same number of men insist upon having the same amount of fish to eat as they had before. The 50 men who formerly cleaned and cooked the fish have less to do owing to the under-supply of fish. But they continue to demand food.

Gradually greater bundens are laid upon the fruit and vegetables hunters. These insist upon a larger share of the fish in return for their larger efforts in gathering fruit and vegetables. It is denied them and soon 20 of the 25 quit gathering fruit and vegetables.

But the entire 100 men continue to insist upon their right to eat.

The daily food supply gradually shrinks. The man with two fish demands three bananas in exchange for one of them. The man with two bananas refuses to part with one for fewer than three fish.

Finally the 10 men remaining at work quit in disgust. Everybody continues to eat. The hidden fish are brought to light and consumed. Comes a day when there is no food of any kind. Everybody on the island blames everybody else.

What would seem to be the solution? Exactly! We thought you would guess it.

For we repeat that you can't eat, buy, sell, steal, give away, hoard, wear, use, play with or gamble with what isn't.

Ex-Gov. Edwin Warfield Dead.

Edwin Warfield, former Governor of Maryland and a leading financier of Baltimore, died at his home in that city on Wednesday last, after an illness of three months, at the age of 71.

He was born in Oakdale, May 7, 1848, the son of Albert Gallatin Warfield and great-grandson of Capt. Benjamin Warfield, of the Elkridge militia of 1778, who was third in line from Richard Warfield, of the Severn, who settled in Maryland in 1662. His mother, Margaret Gassaway Watkins, was a daughter of Col. Gassaway Watkins, an officer in the wars of the Revolution and 1812, whose wife was Ann Gassaway, daughter of Col. Nicholas Gassaway, of Lord Baltimore's council.

Educated in the public schools of Howard county, he was appointed Register of Wills in that county in 1874, and elected a year later unanimously for a six years' term, during which he completed the study of law. In 1881 he was elected to the State Senate, and at the same time bought and edited the Ellicott City Times. Re-elected to the Senate in succeeding terms, he was made President in 1886, but resigned to accept the appointment by President Cleveland as Surveyor of the Port of Baltimore. In 1887 he bought the Maryland Law Record and changed it to a daily publication.

In 1890 Mr. Warfield conceived and founded the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland, the pioneer surety company of the South, and became its Vice President and General Manager. In 1903 he was elected Governor of Maryland to succeed John Walter Smith, and served until 1908.

Death Of William Dorsey.

In the death of Mr. William Dorsey Montgomery county loses another of its most respected and reliable men. Mr. Dorsey's death occurred Thursday of last week as he was burning leaves near his beautiful home, in the vicinity of Rockville, and he had already fallen asleep in the arms of Death when discovered by his wife and granddaughter.

Mr. Dorsey was born in Carroll county, Md., in 1848, and was related to the Dorseys of both Carroll and Howard. He has spent thirty-one years of his life in Montgomery, where he has operated a large farm in a most successful manner. In recent years, though retiring from active labors on his farm, he has continued to take a lively interest in all matters looking forward to the improvement of farm conditions, nor would his great energy allow him to remain totally inactive. He continued to do little tasks about his home and he was at work when Death claimed him.

The funeral service evidenced the high position Mr. Dorsey had gained in the hearts of the community. Sorrowing friends came from far and near till his large home was crowded with those assembled to pay their tribute of love. The Scripture lesson was read by Rev. Millard F. Minnick, of the Episcopal Church, while Rev. P. Rowland Wagner, of the Baptist Church, delivered the last remarks over the body of the deceased, Mr. Dorsey having been a member of the Baptist Church for some years. His body was laid to rest in Rockville Union Cemetery, his pallbearers being composed of men whom he had known best during his stay here.

Mr. Dorsey leaves behind him a host of friends who shall remember long and miss much his geniality, kindness, industry and ability, and they all join in heartfelt sympathy for those two—his wife, Mrs. Gertrude Lyddane Dorsey, and his granddaughter Katharine—who must continue to bear in their hearts the "loneliness unspeakable" till the long night is past.

"Now the Laborer's task is o'er;
Now the battle day is past;
Now upon the farther shore
Lands the voyager at last.
Father, in Thy gracious keeping
Leave we now Thy servant sleeping."

Wheat Prospects Good.

In spite of the severe winter and late spring the wheat crop is showing signs of being much better than was at first expected by agricultural experts. According to Prof. T. B. Symons, director of the extension service staff of the Maryland State College of Agriculture and secretary of the Maryland Agricultural Society, the wheat crop is in what is technically termed 80 per cent. perfect condition.

During a winter which is consistently cold and when there is a great deal of snow wheat flourishes, according to Mr. Symons. However, when the weather is alternately warm and cold water settles around the base of the plants and when it freezes lifts the roots out of the ground. In this exposed condition the plants soon die. A quantity of hail and sleet likewise proves adverse.

During the last winter, although there was considerable sleet, the weather was almost continuously cold and the wheat did not grow large enough to be seriously injured. The fact that it has been continuously cold almost up to the present time makes the prospect not only for wheat but for all fruits much brighter than was thought during the winter.

Unless there is a heavy frost about the middle of April, Prof. Symons said, fruit will have passed its crisis, and there will be a large yield. The cold weather has prevented premature budding, and a slow development of the fruit will take place.

With reference to the tomato outlook, Professor Symon said conditions were puzzling. Canners have been refusing to make contracts because they fear the Government will release large quantities of canned goods left from army supplies, and that the market will become demoralized. The farmer consequently is doubtful as to the acreage he should lay aside for tomatoes. A new system by which the yield of tomatoes may be raised from three and a-half or four to six or eight tons an acre is being explained to the farmers and it is likely that by this means it will be possible for him to protect himself. The system calls for scientific fertilizing and for spraying at certain seasons with solutions selected after an analysis of the soil.

Let Us Take Warning From Germany's Fate How We Sacrifice The Vital Principle Of State Sovereignty.

MR. EDITOR:—It is interesting to watch history repeat and also reverse itself. In 1861 a small Southern State defied the Federal Government in defense of a great principle. After a struggle, which a Northern writer says was never equaled in history except by the Romans in the second Punic war, she lost. Now, 60 years after, a tiny Northern State challenges that same Government in defense of that same principle; but she gets no sympathy from the land of Hayne and Calhoun, and Virginia, mother of Jefferson and Madison, of Mason and Randolph, of Lee and Jackson, who interposed her body between the storm and her Southern sister, turns her back upon her Northern sister in her cry for help. Oh, Virginia, what fairy has poured the juice of "Love in Idleness" in your eyes that you have come to repudiate the doctrine first announced by your immortal son—"Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed?" Your heroic dead "will not sleep" if they can know that you have "broken faith" with them who died for this great principle.

The fathers of our Government had a difficult task in making its Constitution. With a prophetic vision they saw that with our vast territory and the empire-making instincts of the Anglo-Saxon race the Government they were binding would one day become one of if not the greatest power on earth. And yet the teachings of all history behind them showed them that a democratic form of government had not been a safe and permanent government for a great State. It had proven the best for a small State, where all the people were neighbors and interests were identical; but only the iron hand of a despotic central power could hold together the far separate units of a far-spread empire.

How to make ours both safe and great was their dilemma. With a vision and judgment never equaled they evolved the doctrine of "State's Rights." We would be small and big at the same time. Each community would guard its own interests and yet they could have the strength of unity by each State surrendering a fraction of its sovereignty to a central government to insure united action in the event of outside aggression.

This doctrine was thought so essential to our continuation as one people that as soon as the Constitution was adopted, for fear that it had not been sufficiently emphasized, amendments were made to it, stating in the fewest and plainest words possible that entire sovereignty remained in the States, except so far as a portion of it had been unmistakably granted to the central government.

From the first traitors and plotters have sought to destroy this sheet-anchor of our national safety. But, thanks to the destiny which has so far guided our course, the great heart of the people has been true to it. Even in the crisis of our Civil War, when the South was beaten into the dust in defending it, the victors marched home with the determination of being not citizens of a great consolidated empire, but citizens of Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, etc. The vanquished were the victors, for the idea for which they fought lived in the hearts of their conquerors.

We have a vivid illustration of what consolidation leads to in recent history. It has been justly said that the most distinguishing characteristic of the Teuton character was love of civil and personal liberty. Our own love of liberty comes from our Teutonic ancestors. As long as the German States maintained their individual sovereignty the Germans were a wise and advancing people, the leaders of human thought and human enterprise. Ambitious plotters went to work and blotted out State lines. We know the result. The originators of liberty became the slaves of a despot who made them drunk with his own ambition and led them to their ruin.

Let us profit by their example. Let us keep our Constitution, as fashioned by the fathers, clean and pure; and be it South Carolina or Rhode Island that cries to us for assistance in this great enterprise, fly to her assistance.

Wet Cause Strong In Maryland.

"There is no doubt that if the people of Maryland were given an opportunity to vote on prohibition they would be against it overwhelmingly," remarked J. A. Joyce, of Baltimore, at the Washington. "This is reflected in the sentiment among the legislators at Annapolis, where if the delegates and members of the Senate were to express their real views they would be two to one against prohibition. The question of a referendum has no terrors for the wets of Maryland, for they know that the voters will register their opposition at the polls.

"It is for this reason that Gov. Edwards, of New Jersey, is popular among the Democrats, and I have no doubt he could carry the State in the presidential primary. It is likely, however, that Gov. Ritchie will be Maryland's favorite son at San Francisco. He would defeat Attorney General Palmer, and it looks now as if his friends are going to insist on running him. Among the Republicans there is a strong disposition to send an uninstructed delegation to the convention. The supporters of Gen. Wood made an effort to induce the organization to instruct for the general, but the leaders of the party opposed any instructions for the soldier candidate. I have found that the sentiment is largely for Senator Harding and Gov. Lowden, and I believe either of these will receive the votes of a majority of the Maryland delegation in the convention. Senator Harding has some advantage, because he has frequently spoken in Maryland and is perhaps better known than the Illinois Governor."—Washington Post.

In Memoriam.

In sad but loving remembrance of Mrs. Charles G. du Fief, who departed this life one year ago today, March 22, 1919.

It was an early morning hour,
One year ago today,
The angel of death came down to earth
And took our loved one away.

She will never be forgotten,
And never shall her memory fade,
Sweetest thoughts shall ever linger
Around the grave where she was laid.

Sleep on, dear one, and take thy rest,
God called you home, He thought it best,
He saw your suffering here so great,
He opened wide the golden gate.

A DEAR FRIEND.

In sad but loving remembrance of my darling son, John F. Swartzbeck 3rd, who departed this life February 6, 1920, aged 1 year, 1 month and 19 days.

Oh, for a look of that sweet little face,
A word from his dear little lips,
To see once again our darling baby,
Whom God has taken away.

Flowers wither, leaves fade and die,
Though others forget, yet never shall I.
My heart today is heavy, my thoughts are all of thee,
How I love you and miss you none but God can see.

HIS LOVING MAMA.

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear father, George F. Crown, who departed this life at his home at Derwood, Md., of heart disease, on March 13th, 1920, aged 73 years. He was laid to rest in the family graveyard at Derwood. He was the father of twelve children, six of whom survive him. He was loved by all who knew him. Gone but not forgotten.

A happy home we once enjoyed,
How sweet the memory still,
But death has left a vacant place
This world can never fill.

No matter how heavy our loss,
No matter how great our despair,
It makes heaven nearer and dearer,
To know our dear father is there.

Rest on, dear father, and take your rest,
God called you home, He thought it best,
He saw your suffering here was great,
And opened wide the golden gate.

In Derwood sweetly sleeping,
Where the trees their branches wave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly
In his lonely, silent grave.

Days of sadness still come over,
Tears of sorrow silent flow,
Fond memory keeps our father near us,
Though heaven claimed him several days ago.

It is sweet to know we will meet again,
Where parting is no more,
And the one we loved so dearly
Has only gone before.

BY HIS LOVING CHILDREN.
