Hicks' Forecast for November.

The regular storm period embraces the 2nd to 7th, within which period the moon is in the celestial equator on the 2nd, is in pedigree on the 4th and full on the 6th. These perturbing positions of the moon, blended with the combined disturbances of Vulcan and Mercury, are very apt to bring on decided autumnal storms during the first week in November. A change to much warmer weather will set in westward about the 2nd, falling barometer will follow in the same section, cloudiness will rapidly cease, and storms of rain, wind and probably thunder southward, will result during the 3rd to the 6th. On the western and northern sides of these storms expect the rain to turn to heavy sleet and snow. Sleet will be a marked feature over vast sections—a fact to be noted by all who manage the wires and similar interests. Blizzards north and west ending in fierce gales over the lakes and on the North Atlantic, are quite probable about Sunday the 4th to Wednesday the 7th. A general cold wave, frost and freezing will bring up the rear of these storms, progressing from the north west to eastward and southward. Many of the worst storms of our winter months occur at the Mercury periods when they blend with the regular storm periods, especially the storms that sweep at north westerly tangents down over Canada, along the lake regions and the North Atlantic. We caution navigators, shippers and all concerned in those regions against probable danger during this first November period, and against the severe cold that will follow.

On touching the 10th, 11th and 12th the barometer will fall and general reaction to storm conditions will return. The perturbations attending this reactionary period will be followed by a rapid but short lived rise of the barometer and spurt of cold. By the 15th a decided change to warmer will have developed in the west, the barometer will be falling and more storms of rain and snow will move eastward over the country from the 15th to the 18th. Local cloudiness and occasional autumnal squalls may occur at almost any time, even outside of storm periods, but decided and general storm movements will fall conspicuously within the storm period. Another decided day of early winter will follow this period, being generally felt over the country and lasting up to about the 21st.

A correct and impartial observer will soon discover that the temperature rises, as a rule, at about the conjunction of the moon with earth and sun, or in other words, at the new moon. The barometer usually falls at the same time. Ocean tides are higher, seismic and earthquake shivers are more apt to occur, and storm phenomena are perpetually intensified, also, when our satellite passes between us and the sun. New moon this month falls on the 22nd, the central day of reactionary storm period. Moon is at its extreme south point on the 33rd, hence northerly gales and cold will follow storms at this time, promptly and sharply.

The last storm period for November is central on the 27th, extending from the 25th to the 30th. Market storm conditions will begin westward about the 25th and energetic storms of rain, wind and snow will pass eastward over the country on the 27th to 30th. Moon being on the celestial equator on the 30th high temperature, rain, snow and storminess will not subside generally until after that date, although a high barometer and cold wave will be in sight in the northwest as the month goes out.

Killed by a Boy.—Bernard Washington, alias Bernard Lee, a colored boy about 17 years of age, was shot and instantly killed about 10 o'clock last Friday morning at the home of Eliza Parker, colored, near Hunting Hill. The shooting was done by Edward Parker, aged not more than 9 years.

Shortly after the shooting Sheriff Williams was notified, and he directed Deputy Galtier and Justice of the Peace Robertson visited the scene of the shooting and held an inquest over the dead boy's remains. The testimony showed that Eliza Parker left home Friday morning to go to the store and locked her three small children, among them her son Edward, in the house. While the children were alone Washington visited the Parker house. From the outside he began throwing clods of dirt through a stove pipe hole in the side of the house at the children within. While engaged in this annoying the children he stood on the top of a stove on the outside of the building. While he was still on the stove the muzzle of a musket was thrust through the hole and discharged. Washington was struck in the head, the entire upper portion of which was blown off. He died instantly. The coroner's jury found that death was caused by a gunshot wound, and held Edward Parker responsible.

Immediately after the shooting the little Parker boy broke open a window and left the house. He was arrested Friday evening by a constable and taken to the station. He was taken to the home of a neighbor and told what had happened. It was stated by a gentleman who resides near Hunting Hill that Washington had been suspected of stealing several articles from the Parker house, and that the Parker woman had directed her son to shoot him if he attempted to enter the house during her absence, and that he did attempt to enter, and the mother's directions were carried out.
