The burden is eventually borne, the committee was informed, by American hotel guests, who are unaware, in most cases, that the hotel is Jap controlled because the Jap proprietor remains in the background and employs white men and women to operate his property.

There are enough Japanese in this locality now, was the consensus of opinion expressed by witnesses.

There was a divergence of opinion as to whether they are law-abiding and honest. Some witnesses said they are, others produced statistics showing that Japanese are engaged in illicit industries, such as booze and gambling.

CONTROL PUBLIC MARKET HERE

They now control the public market—owning or holding 50 per cent of the stalls. They are rapidly rising to control of the laundry business here. The vegetable business is now almost entirely in control of Japs; even Italian vendors have been forced to the wall.

The proposed legislation is against them, they are apparently in a position to "pull the strings" and have their wish. This, according to Lieut. Philip Tindall, city councilman, based on his observations while in public office.

AMERICANS CANNOT COMPETE WITH JAPS

Once they arrive in this country they work faithfully and industriously, but at such low wages, living so cheaply and in some instances so unsanitary, that Americans cannot compete with them.

The result of this low standard of living, as pointed out by Col. W. M. Inglis, in one instance was this: After the war the Stetson-Pot Lumber company advertised for 30 men. Thirty war veterans were sent, they waited at the mill. Thirty Japs came. The Japs got the jobs. The veterans were turned down.

Jap Prober Will Talk to Veterans

Representative William N. Valle, of Colorado, a member of the congressional Jap probe committee, will deliver a stereoscopic lecture on "The Red vs. the Red-White-and-Blue," under the auspices of the Veterans' Republican club at 8:30 Thursday evening, probably in the Masonic club rooms. The meeting will be public, and open to women.

"Big Story" Is Due to Break at Three P. M.

LOS ANGELES, July 28.—John Armstrong Chaloner, grandson of John Jacob Astor, and famed for his fight in the New York courts to be declared legally sane, is registered at a local hotel, under the name of "J. H. Chilton," and agreed to make public a "big story," believed to be a report of his first year's fight against the "lunacy trust."

a kiddie doubling of one knee under her, into the couch corner.

"I'm 25," she said. "But I've just never thought much about politics."

"I was brought up in the country, near Chicago, and I raved around with the boys—my two brothers—and did athletic things and was always driving something—a donkey, a pony, then horses, and now motorcycles (not to mention the baby carriage).

"My mother died some years ago and then I managed the home and took care of father and the boys."

"Then I was silly enough to get neuritic—only illness I ever had in my life! Dad packed me off to Virginia Hot Springs—and—well, there isn't much more to tell."

I made frantic protest, for here we were, getting down to what I wanted to know more than anything else, and my pretty lady was breaking off.

LOVE AT NIGHT? ASK MRS. ANSHERY

Was it—was it love at night? "It certainly WAS!" The speaker was Mrs. T. T. Ansberry, who, with Judge Ansberry, her husband, has known "Jimmy" Cox for years. She had suddenly come into the room.

"Wasn't it, Margaretta?"

"Well, perhaps—if you want to put it that way. I suppose there's always a strong attraction between a girl and a man who ultimately marry—even the first time they meet."

"Nonsense!" was Mrs. Ansberry's comment. "You know perfectly well, Margaretta, that the moment Jimmy Cox saw you that day on the porch after the golf game, HE was absolutely blind and deaf to every other human being, while YOU—why, didn't you give away the bunch of orchids he sent you?"

This was getting interesting. "Orchids—orchids!" I urged. "Tell me."

"You tell her," said Mrs. Cox to Mrs. Ansberry. "If you want to. Besides—I only loaned them."

The story went on.

PIOTED TO MAKE A LOVER REPENTANT

That was a chum of the then Margaretta Blair had suffered a serious quarrel with her dearest young man. Miss Blair was the confidante, and proved her wisdom by suggesting that a touch of jealousy might arouse the recalcitrant to the desirable apology and reconciliation.

But how to make him jealous, aye, that was the rub.

"Wear my orchids," pronounced the then Miss Blair, for orchids, as any woman knows, always mean an admirer. No girl buys orchids for herself. No girl sends another girl orchids unless she means a M.A.N., a devoted man, and a man with a bank balance.

These particular orchids did their work well.

"And they were as good as new when she brought them back to me last night after the making-up," laughed the now Mrs. Cox. "I wonder if Jim knows of his first bunch of flowers."

"He wouldn't have minded," put in Mrs. Ansberry. "He sent a fresh box every day for months and months until you began to see the light, Margaretta."

Mrs. Cox smiled, as one who has long seen the light. "But it is an open secret that she did not see it for a year and a half, and that her family looked dubiously askance at a suitor with 20 years advantage of their girl."

"But no one," affirms Mrs. Cox, "can know Jim without loving him. Even his political enemies love him personally."

"As for father—well, father was always the kind of republican to whom you wouldn't even mention a democrat!"

"It took me a long time to tell dad Jim's politics. You see, he was only an ex-governor when I met him. He had served but one term, and father didn't know much about him. He has been elected twice since, and here's the miracle—father is going to vote for him next November!"

Seek Trunk Murderer on Pacific Coast

SAN FRANCISCO, July 28.—Coast police departments today took a hand in the attempt to unravel the mysterious New York-Detroit "trunk murder."

They were looking for Eugene Leroy, said to be the husband of Katherine Leroy, who, Eastern authorities believe, might have been the woman whose mutilated body was found in a trunk at the American Express office in New York.

The search started on telegraphic advice from the East, saying a railroad porter had seen a man answering Leroy's description on a train bound for San Francisco or Los Angeles.

Report Leroy Now Hiding in Mexico

DETROIT, Mich., July 28.—E. Fernandez, alias Eugene Leroy, alias Wood, sought in connection with the New York-Detroit trunk murder mystery, is now in Saltillo, state of Coahuila, Mexico, according to word received here today by Chief of Detectives Fox.

JITNEY HEARING IS POSTPONED

Temporary Injunction Is Still in Force

Hearing of the jitney bus interest suit against the city was postponed Wednesday until September 20 by Superior Judge Everett Smith.

The case was to have been heard today on its merits, but the continuance was made because of a writ of prohibition obtained by the jitneymen's attorneys from the supreme court made returnable on August 20. In the meantime the temporary injunction held against the city by the drivers will remain in force until after the arguments on the supreme court writ are heard.

City officials, meeting hurriedly in Mayor Caldwell's office Tuesday afternoon, were unable to decide on a line of procedure to be followed in the jitney tangle.

A suggestion that the city council proceed at once to pass an ordinance absolutely prohibiting jitneys in Seattle was considered but was not put to a vote.

SAYS BABIES ARE IN DANGER
 Council Refuses Extra Milk Sampler

In refusing to grant the department of health an extra milk sampler the budget committee of the city council is endangering the lives of thousands of Seattle babies, according to Dr. H. M. Read, commissioner of health, Wednesday.

"One sampler cannot examine all of the milk that is shipped into Seattle," Dr. Read declared before the committee. "Refusal to allow us one extra man means that dozens of babies will die next year thru infectious diseases."

The budget committee increased the number of welfare nurses from two to three, but denied the request for two sanitary inspectors and added another clinic nurse to the personnel of the department.

Owing to the inability of the city hospital to obtain student nurses, the councilmen granted an increase of five trained nurses to the staff, at a cost of $5,040.

Provisions were made in the health department budget for an increased staff at Firlands, the city sanitarium and quarantine station.
