

USED REFL. CAR
SCARE SUITOR

Kengrzywski Adopted Drastic Manner of Driving Away Sister's Friend

HELD UNDER $500
BAIL FOR COURT

Albin Dreika postponed his court-ship of Martha Kengrzywski just a little too long and persistently last night, with the consequence that when he did decide to leave, he did it in a hurry and took no time to offer objections. He made a hasty retreat from the house, while Frank Kengrzywski, Martha's brother, banged away twice with a rifle.

The facts were brought out in Municipal Court this morning when Frank was given a hearing on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder. He was held in $500 bail for court by Judge Hastings.

Frank admitted that he fired the rifle to frighten away the persistent lover, but said that it was the only effect was to frighten away the sister's suitor. He said that he had no intention of hitting Dreika, but that he did in a hurry. He said that when his brother came out with the rifle and started aiming at Dreika, who immediately started his flight, she grabbed it and directed the shots upward to save Dreika from injury.

This was not the first time that Albin got into trouble over Martha. Several weeks ago he was jacked by two other youths when he resented a remark they made.

RESOLUTE SETS
RACE PACE TODAY

closed up the sails and both yachts were sailing almost on an even basis, ten minutes after the start.

The official starting time was 12:30. Shamrock led by fifty-six seconds. Shamrock had again established a lead of about a minute at 12:50. The yachts were moving very slowly.

The following spectators were thrown into considerable confusion as the motor boats raced around, rearranging the lines. The vessels were nearly two miles to the westward of the course.

Shamrock pulled away slightly from the Resolute and established a lead of a quarter of a mile soon after 1 o'clock.

The yachts were four miles off their course at 1:40, with Shamrock gaining out-drawing Resolute slightly. The yachts were still moving in the dying north wind. A new wind appeared coming up from the south.

At 1:50 Shamrock was leading by a quarter of a mile. Both yachts were hauled in.

Shamrock began to pick up a little land breeze at 1:30 and gained rapidly. Resolute was almost becalmed 400 yards astern.

The two yachts were nearly 5 miles off their course at 1:35. Shamrock held a lead of 200 yards. Both yachts were under main sail, club topsail and balloons.

When about a mile from shore Shamrock luffed to starboard and Resolute immediately followed. Both yachts headed for the mark.

Resolute slipped out ahead of Shamrock at 1:50. It appeared that Shamrock had been in too close and gave the American vessel an opportunity to come from behind. Resolute was holding a better breeze than the challenger and besides was to the windward. It was a clever move by Captain Adams to take the lead from the Lipton boat.

Resolute hoisted a balloon fore-sail and Shamrock followed with a small fore-sail. Resolute's lead was about fifty yards at 1:55. She was also 100 yards to windward.

Both Shamrock IV and Resolute were in perfect condition after Saturday's buffeting. They were carefully examined yesterday and took a short spin around Sandy Hook bay in the afternoon to stretch new canvas. Today's race is a fifteen mile heat to windward and return. As each yacht now has two victories to its credit the winner of today's contest will win the trophy.

Charles Nicholson, designer of the Shamrock IV, today settled the question of which skipper first agreed to postpone of Saturday's race. He said the committee first signalled the Resolute if Captain Adams would agree to a postponement.

The Resolute skipper did not reply but took a spin into the wind to test the seas. In the meantime the question was put to Captain Burton, of the Shamrock IV, who was first to agree.

There was a distinct snap to the air today which sent the racing crews about their work with even greater zest than usual. With a bonus of $250 a man in sight if the Shamrock IV wins, the challenger's crew was on tip toe.

Both yachts rounded the Hook at a lively clip shortly after 10 A. M. and Shamrock was under main sail and Jib and Resolute under main sail, club top sail and jib.

At 11:30 the regatta committee hoisted the postponement flag.

Shamrock IV, in trying out her sails, fell into a calm, and drifted miles to the westward of the lightship and had to call for her tug to tow her back.

At 11:45 the breeze at the lightship was scarcely more than three miles an hour, but there was every indication of better conditions later in the day.

CAN'T SUPPLY
PHONE ORDERS

More Than Quarter of a Million Orders Will Be Unfilled for Months

NEW YORK, July 26.—"Waiting?" asks the operator. "Waiting? Waiting?"

Yes, a quarter of a million Americans are waiting—not for the telephone girl to give them a number, but for the company to install the telephone.

And there are indications they will be waiting for some time yet—maybe two or three years. And then when their orders have been filled probably will be as many more applications clamoring for telephones in the United States, where more than two-thirds of all the 'phones in the world are located.

The number of unfilled orders for telephones is a direct reflection of the growth of business in general, and the telephone business in particular. A large number of waiting orders means a phenomenal growth of telephones installed and telephones ordered. For the Bell companies, the country over there are a total of about 150,000 contracts awaiting installation. In addition to this there are considerable number of requests made for telephones which have been made. There never has been and probably will never be a day that there are not unfilled orders, and statistics show the number is normally 60,000 for the Bell system.

On the basis of the results of an inquiry whereby it was learned that in 12 metropolitan districts in the country selected at random there are at present approximately 12,000 unfilled orders for telephones by individual would-be subscribers, it is estimated about 130,000 other applications for equipment in various parts of the country that yet to be filled. At present in the whole country there are about 12,000,000 telephones now in use.

Business assigned by telephone company officials here and in other cities in most cases were the falling off of production, inability of manufacturers to get transportation for supplies and a general shortage of materials and labor.

In New York city alone there are now on file 53,000 applications for installation of telephones in residences, apartment houses, offices and factories. And there are already about 83,000 subscribers in the greater city. Unfilled orders as reported from other cities are as follows:

Chicago, 35,000; Cleveland, 7,500; Minneapolis and St. Paul, 1,600; Indianapolis, 3,000; Boston, 19,000; Philadelphia, 4,000; Oklahoma City, 2,000; St. Louis, 1,800; Connecticut, 2,500; Atlanta, 2,800; Birmingham, 1,500; Mobile, 1,000 and Springfield, Ill., 400.

In explaining the situation that confronts the American Telephone and Telegraph Company (the Bell System), which, with its associated companies, owns or controls more than 14,000,000 telephones in use throughout the United States, an official of that company said:

"Great manufacturing plants have changed their products over night, a word the making of arms, ammunition and materials of war has been stopped and the manufacture of plows, dynamite and other necessities of the varied materials of peace has been begun."

"Unfilled orders are on hand, new contracts are needed, new switchboards, new relays, new distribution boards, new conduits, new cables, new manholes, new pole lines, new wiring, and every kind of thing thousands of miles of cable must be laid, thousands of miles of wire must be spliced and strung, uncounted millions of joints must be made, and the central office of the whole country is teeming with this construction, covering every electrical process from the production to installation of the subscriber's instruments."

Among the materials most used by the telephone companies and which it has been impossible to obtain, the official said—either due to falling off of production or to poor transportation—are as follows:

Copper—In 1925, 25,000,000 pounds was used for telephone lines and 50,000,000 pounds for making lead-covered cables and apparatus.

Steel—Approximately 18,000,000 pounds used for telegraph lines, steel structural shapes and magnet steel.

Galvanized iron and steel wire—Approximately 10,000 tons used every year.

Lead—Annual requirements are 100,000,000 pounds.

Antimony and Tin—Annual requirements 1,000,000 and 700,000 pounds, respectively, and most of which comes from China, Japan and the Straits Settlements.

Brass Rod and Sheet—10,000,000 pounds used every year.

The reason given by Lloyd George for recent negotiations in London with Krasin, Bolshevik commissar of trade and commerce, was that Great Britain would receive large supplies of raw materials from Russia through a trade agreement. This contention is not accepted here. It is believed England could trade by barter with Russia without any formal agreement.

Where the disease has reached the acute stage the meat is in such a condition that it would not prove salable even though offered, just where the disease is in its early stages, rendering the milk unsafe for use, the diseased portions of the cattle are thrown away and the remainder sold.

Thirty diseased cattle were killed in this county during the past week, one man declared, and while all of the cows possibly were not brought here, it is believed by those who have interested themselves in the subject that the bulk of the meat was offered for sale in the city markets on Saturday.

day at the request of Philip L. Garrett, who represented both defendants.

Campbell testified that on Saturday night he and another man bought and drank two quarts of wine at Macari's home, and took a quart away with them. He returned later to buy another quart and Macari refused to sell him more, the complainant stated.

Campbell said he then called Macari a liar and two men grabbed him while Gassanoli knocked him senseless with a bottle, causing a gash on his forehead.

Campbell said that had he not been intoxicated he would have been too much of a man to allow Gassanoli to get the better of him.

Mr. Garrett asked him if Macari put him out of the house. "He didn't put me out, but he knocked me out when he hit me with the bottle," responded Campbell.

Campbell also showed knife cuts alleged to have been inflicted by Gassanoli.

After the court police raided the house and found five and a half barrels of alcohol and a quantity of mash and grapes in various stages of fermentation.

Louis Dambrosia, said to have been associated with Macari, was arrested on a charge of violating the Volstead act. In addition to the charge of selling intoxicating liquor without a license, a like charge is preferred against Gassanoli.
