PAIR FROM THE COUNTRY AMUSED SMYRNA FOLK

Special to the Evening Journal. Smyrna, July 3.—A rustic couple attracted considerable attention here yesterday afternoon by hunting for a preacher telling everyone they met that they wanted to get married. The man was about five feet three and very slender, while his bride to be was considerably over six feet. The oddly mated pair strolled out Commerce street hand in hand, having the appearance of a mother leading her son rather than a bride and groom. The last seen of them they were standing in front of St. Peter's Church waiting for the rector, two of the four people who accompanied the pair having gone for the clergyman. However, he was out of town and the lovers had to seek elsewhere for a preacher, going over to Clayton. Such billing and cooing as they did was never before witnessed on the streets of this town, and the citizens who saw them were convulsed with laughter.

Lightning's Victims Recovering. Special to the Evening Journal. Smyrna, July 3.—Benjamin I. Boggs, wife and little daughter were able to be out yesterday after a thrilling experience with lightning on Friday night. While the short thunder storm was passing over this section, Mr. Boggs' home, on the Middleton farm, was struck, a hole torn in the roof and the three occupants stunned severely, so badly, in fact, they have been confined to the bed. The building was not fired.

SEVERAL FIRED UPON BY UNKNOWN PERSONS. Special to the Evening Journal. Bridgeville, July 3.—While walking down the railroad last evening Harry Tull, a young man of this town, was fired upon by unknown parties, who immediately took to their heels. The bullet passed in close proximity to his head.

A number of tramps were also fired upon while passing the spot later in the evening, one of whom came near being hit.

Believed to be the Hall. It is believed that the schooner Frank S. Hall, which was run down and sunk by the British steamship Bermuda, has been sighted. The British steamship Ethelwood, which arrived at Philadelphia yesterday from Boca del Toro, reported that on June 30, nine miles south by east of Winter Quarter Lightship, a sunken wreck in eleven fathoms of water was passed, which is believed to be the Hall. Part of one mast extended twelve feet above the water.

Presentation of a Badge. Andrew J. Niedermaier, of No. 12 East Fifth street, a member of the Washington Fire Company, has been presented with a handsome badge by Washington Fire Company, No. 2, of Reading, Pa. The badge was given to Mr. Niedermaier in honor of his fortieth birthday anniversary.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system. The cure for one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

INJURY CAME TOO LATE

Accident Insurance Company Suits Off Benefit by Suspension. Recently J. Harvey Wood, the popular young stenographer for George T. Brown, was riding down the Rising Sun hill on a bicycle when he was thrown to the ground and severely injured. Mr. Wood had been carrying an accident policy, but a few days before he was injured the announcement was made that the company with which he had insured would go out of business.

The unfortunate young man is mourning both the accident and the failure of the insurance company to keep in business until after he had been injured.

LEVIED ON BOSTOCK COMPANY

Claim Was for Only $35 and Attachment Was Lifted

Constable Lukens, of Chester, laid an attachment on a part of the Bostock Company's show which was performing in that city.

The attachment was issued by Alderman Scott and was for damages to the extent of $35 done to a barn between this city and Chester, on the B. & O. railroad while the show was being hauled to Chester at the conclusion of its performance here. The railroad company, however, agreed to settle the claim and the attachment was lifted.

JOKE ON MOGULLIANS

Serenaded the Empty House of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Woods

For several days members of Wilmington Conclave, No. 13, have been secretly planning to serenade the popular grand secretary of the A. O. U. W., Charles E. Woods and his wife, who were recently married. Last night the band of members swooped stealthily down upon the home of Mr. Woods, No. 820 Jackson street, and proceeded to use all the noise of which a tumultuous aggregation is capable.

The serenaders, evidently overflowing with glee, continued their pranks for some time, attempting everything suggested that might cause Mr. and Mrs. Woods to appear. But neither put in an appearance. Suddenly a neighbor opened her door and informed the serenaders that Mr. and Mrs. Woods had gone to Atlantic City for a week.

There was no more noise. The disappointed Mogullians dispersed quickly down the back streets, and not one of them will give an account of his whereabouts last night.

PROBABLY 300 KILLED IN HOBOKEN HOLOCAUST

gone, and portions of the limbs were missing. The second was found near the steamer entrance, buried in a great heap of rubbish. This body was thought to be that of the steward's assistant. Several more bodies were found in the same locality. Three other bodies were found later in the hold, a little forward of amidships in the hold. These bodies were thought to be those of painters and decorators who had been at work in the hold at the time the fire broke out.

It is generally believed that a greater number of the bodies in the Saale is still to be recovered. It is thought that most of them are under water, and that many of them cannot be removed until the ship is raised.

The Saale had settled a foot in the mud since Sunday night. The captain in charge of the wrecking operations said:

"I think I will get her off, but she will never carry passengers again."

There was a scene of activity all day yesterday on and about the Main and the Bremen, which lie beached in parallel positions within 75 feet of each other and about 1,000 feet from the Jersey Shore, opposite West Forty-second street, New York. The Bremen was gutted from stem to stern, and only the frame remains. The decks are ripped from the rivets and what wood remains of them is completely charred through. The general opinion is, however, that the Bremen can be successfully raised and will again be placed in commission. Despite reports to the contrary, not one body had been taken from either the Main or the Bremen up to midnight, and the officers of both ships say that should any dead be found the bodies will be beyond recognition. This applies more to the Main than to the Bremen, as the former is nothing but a mass of twisted iron. That the Main is damaged beyond redemption is the consensus of opinion of not only wrecking experts, but also the opinion of Capt. Peterson, of the Main. The ship is now nothing but a red hulk, from which exude acrid fumes of various density.

Rumors exist among the wreckers that four or five bodies were thought to be in the steward's quarters of the Main, but a glance through the superheated gas and steam exhibited only several berths full of white ash, and until further investigation is made possible by the cooling of the ship nothing can be said as to whether the ashes are those of men or the remains of beds and clothing. It is estimated that the remains of not more than 20 persons are aboard the Main, and should there be a hundred, or even more, it is certain none will ever be identified, or even the exact number known.

On the Bremen, where the fire was not so intense, notwithstanding the great damage, the first body has yet to be found, and will not be until the ship is pumped out or explored by divers. No diver has yet been down on the inside of the ship.

Second Officer Sander, of the Saale, said this morning that several of the officers of the steamships would issue a signed and sworn statement that the captains of the tugboats did not do all in their power to help the ships that were lying in their cables. His ship had been cut loose from the pier, and another officer stood at the stern of the ship with men ready to man lines of tugboats. He said they shouted to the tugboat captains, a number of whom were close under his ship, but that no response was made, the tugs simply lying by until they could get near enough to the great Kaiser Wilhelm der Gross to render enough assistance to claim salvage.

Today claims for salvage aggregating $150,000 were made against the big steamer.
