Fate Of Important Measures.

Gov. Warfield on Monday, the limit of lawful time to consider bills, acted on a number of measures of vital interest. Most important of these was the signing of the Anti-Out-Of-Bill, which prevents the Pennsylvania Railroad from building its freight cut off along the route it had selected and compels it to go out beyond Owings Mills and Timonium, Baltimore county. This the company says it will not do.

The Girde Electric bill for Baltimore, which had been backed at Annapolis by the most powerful lobby of the session, and for which Speaker Benson left the chair and took the floor to make a fight, was vetoed. It was said to be full of snakes, and Governor Warfield said it was hasty legislation.

The Two-Cent-a-Mile Railroad bill was killed on the ground that it would work a hardship on the smaller roads.

The appropriation of $150,000 for the expenses of the next Legislature was vetoed on the ground of economy, all the actually necessary expenses of the session being already provided for. This action of the Governor will compel the next Legislature to practice the most rigid economy or itemize the bill. It marks a new departure and is simply in line with the Governor's attitude assumed before this Legislature began, to do all he could to put a stop to the reckless and unnecessary expenditure of the people's money. The placing of a large sum like $70,000 in the hands of the presiding officers of the two houses as a contingent fund, he believes, is a bad plan and the temptation for extravagance is too great to be resisted.

The Free-Passes for Officials bill was another that went to the slaughter. Senator Gorman's bill providing for an examination by the State into the affairs of corporations was also vetoed, but for a different reason. "This bill," said the Governor, "takes $1,000 out of the State Treasury to make such an examination. General Vandiver has clerks enough in his office to make the examination, if necessary, and one of them can do it."

Another one of Mr. Gorman's bills that was disapproved was the one providing for primaries in Ellicott City, in which was incorporated the understanding clause of the P. O. amendment. "I would have approved this bill," said the Governor, "had it contained the provision of the Frederick county law, but not in this shape."

Yet another Howard county bill met death at his hands. This was the one increasing the pay of the County Commissioners. "I vetoed this bill because there are plenty of good men in my county willing to do the work of the County Commissioners for $3 a day and mileage, which is what they now get," said the Governor.

The bill incorporating the Montgomery County Trust Company was vetoed.

Struck by a Train.—A fatal accident occurred on the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad near Gaithersburg, this county, on Tuesday morning last, the victim being Frank McMahon, thirty-five years of age. The engineer in charge of an engine drawing a train of five flat cars, was passing the train when the motionless form of the man lying near the tracks. He stopped his train and members of the crew soon found that the form was unconscious. One of the man's legs had been fractured and he had received other injuries. The dying man was placed aboard the train and taken to Washington, being removed to the Casualty Hospital from the railroad station. Dr. E. C. Richison, of Gaithersburg, one of the surgeons of the railroad company, accompanied the patient to the city and assisted in his removal to the hospital.

The condition of McMahon indicated that he had probably received an injury of his skull, although there was no external hurt of the head. He was suffering greatly from the shock when he reached the hospital, and his condition was so serious that he did not respond to the strong stimulants administered. Death occurred a few minutes after reaching the hospital. The body was turned over to the morgue and will be held until relatives of the deceased are found. It is stated that the young man had been employed by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad near Gaithersburg. It is stated that McMahon was struck by westbound train No. 47 about 6:30 o'clock Tuesday morning. It is said that in getting out of the way of eastbound train No. 4 he stepped immediately in front of train 47.

Revival of the Tariff Issue.

There has been in the past few weeks a remarkable strengthening of the feeling in favor of tariff revision. In a carefully dictated interview which he gave to the Washington correspondent of The News on Saturday, Mr. John Sharp Williams, Democratic leader of the House, started out with this declaration: "The tariff is going to be revised. If the Republican party has sense enough and courage enough to revise it, they may stay even then, because it is felt that there is a check needed upon them in other directions. If they do not revise it on right lines, some party will." Speaker Cannon has given out his own views in one or two recent utterances, and the gist of them seems to be that the only way to get tariff revision from the Republicans is to elect a Democratic House in 1906, and thus compel the Republicans to undertake the revision of the tariff in 1907. Mr. Cannon does not want any revision at all, but is willing to admit that if the people clamor for it loud enough they will have to have it; and, as the only way that you can make any disturbance worth bothering about along this line is to send opposition members to the House of Representatives, "Uncle Joe" is doubtless right in his diagnosis of the situation.

Whether, even under the circumstances supposed, Republican revision of the tariff would amount to much may well be doubted; past experience certainly warns us of the extreme doubtfulness of any such prospect. There is, however, one element in the atmosphere of public opinion which is highly conducive to the achievement of something worth while in the way of tariff reduction. The awakening of the people to the prevalence of "graft" in high places and to its deeply demoralizing influence has a direct bearing on the way in which public sentiment would receive the detailed exposure of the conditions of the tariff which would be bound to form the central part of the attack upon Dingleyism. Just as in the insurance cases it was not so much the amount of burden added to the policy holder as the amount of plunder carried off by the insurance magnates that stirred the indignation of the public, so in the matter of the tariff it will be not so much the added burden on the consumer—great as that is—but the enormous amount of loot conveyed by the tariff into the pockets of mighty "speculators of industry" that will be the center of public concern. The idea of laying upon consumers a tax of 50 or 100 per cent. to protect against foreign competition the makers of articles which our industrial concerns are regularly exporting to foreign countries in free competition with goods made in those countries is preposterous; and it is not only preposterous but is sufficiently like plain, every-day "graft" to make it a pretty hard job for its defenders to establish any line of demarcation that they can maintain in the face of a honest fire. The stand-patners who follow a sound instinct in their position; the moment you don't stand pat you open the door to criticism, and criticism means condemnation. The insurance people were all right as long as there were no questions asked, but just as soon as they were put where they had to answer the question "What right had you to do this?" they were lost.

In spite of past experience, therefore, it is just possible that something may come of Republican tariff revision. And even if it does not, the conclusion that Democrats may have in hiding their true position. Behind every prospect of a genuine change in our tariff system—which can be brought about by the Democratic party only—there lurks a sort of nightmare fear. Suppose that a panic should again come in its wake, what then? Of course, if such a thing should happen, protection and prosperity—the highest kind of prosperity—would be linked to the public mind for fifty years to come. In spite of the fact that the 1878 panic, which came in the midst of a long period of unbroken Republican rule, extending before and after that date, and of the fact that that panic was every bit as disastrous and its depressing consequences every bit as long in duration as the panic of 1893, probably four persons out of five are under the impression to day that panics come only with Democratic rule and tariff reduction. What would happen if the big panic came after a Democratic success and the carrying out of a real reform of the tariff may easily be imagined. It would be a real blessing to the country if the next panic were to come along while the Republican party is in full control of the Government.—Baltimore News.

In Memoriam.

The dead shall live again. Died, near Bethesda, Maryland, February 28th, 1906, at his home, Thomas J. Brabham, aged about 41 years, of typhoid pneumonia, of which he was ill about 14 days. He is survived by an aged father, mother and wife, who is a daughter of Rev. M. H. Austin, of Bethesda district; two sons and a daughter. Consecrated to God from birth by his parents and carefully trained in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, he only experienced a change of heart by the holy scripture and became a devoted member of the Baptist church, of which, at the time of his death, he and his wife were members of Mt. Zion, where he is laid to rest until He who shall come who is the resurrection and the life. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. T. H. Campbell, who spoke beautifully and touchingly of him. He had a quick and bright mind, confiding and affectionate disposition, and marked firmness and decision of character. His sudden death was a great surprise and sorrow to his family, relations and many friends. But he needed no funeral, for he was, in fact, his own funeral, for he had lived in readiness to depart and be with his Maker whenever the call might come. He was, in fact, his own funeral, for he had lived in readiness to depart and be with his Maker whenever the call might come. He was, in fact, his own funeral, for he had lived in readiness to depart and be with his Maker whenever the call might come.

Why should our tears in sorrow flow When God recalls his loved ones home And bids them leave a world of woe For an immortal crown? A Friend.

In loving remembrance of Robert Collins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Collins, who died on April 3rd, 1906. Our dear Robert is sleeping So one from all pain, Wake him not, sweet spirits, To suffer again. He slumbers so soundly, Oh! let him sleep on, He knows all of trouble and pain, Oh! think how he suffered And moaned with pain Though the nights we soothed Him in vain. Until God in his mercy Sent down from above An angel that whispered A message of love.

My heavenly home is bright and fair, Nor pain nor death can enter there, Its glittering towers the sun outshine, Let gliding waters flow beside my grave, Far, far above the starry sky, When from this earthly prison free, That heavenly mansion shall be mine. By the family.
