

SIBERIANS MAY FIGHT JAPANESE

Plan to Close Vladivostok Against Foreign Landing

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Fighting between social-revolutionary forces and Japanese troops is expected to break out at any time in the Siberian area between Irkutsk and Vladivostok, according to semi-official advices received here today.

The social-revolutionaries (who are not Bolsheviks) have seized Vladivostok and are reported in practical control of all Siberia as far as Irkutsk, a distance of about 1,500 miles.

This is the territory into which Japan is sending fresh troops thru Vladivostok, to prevent the Bolsheviks entering it and menacing Japanese possessions.

As the slogan of the social-revolutionaries is "no foreign interference in our affairs" there is believed to be danger of active hostilities between the Japanese and the Siberians.

4,000 AMERICANS ARE NOW IN VLADIVOSTOK

Officials here would not be surprised if the Siberians attempted to close Vladivostok against further landings of Japanese. It is hoped that all the United States troops will be out of Siberia before trouble starts. About 4,000 remain, some of them in Vladivostok ready to sail, the remainder scattered along the trans-Siberian railway.

There has already been one clash between the revolutionists and the Japanese, according to advices here. This occurred at Khabarovka, far north of Vladivostok. The revolutionaries were fired upon by Japanese, the message said, but they still hold the town.

Advices from General Graves, American commander in Siberia, indicated the social-revolutionaries were disposed to be friendly.

Allied intervention in Siberia caused the uprisings of social-revolutionaries, it was declared today by a high army officer in daily touch with the Russian situation.

"The people of Siberia were sick of the mucking around of foreign forces," as this officer expressed it, and were being constantly harassed by General Semenov, the Cossack leader, so they decided to take over control of the country, he said.
